...distributors of information in electronic document, book, periodical, e-mail and/or other forms.

Corporations, government agencies, and/or individual "end-users" who act as storers of, and/or distributors of...Communications between VDE nodes under the distributed processing features of ROS 602 may include interprocess service requests as discussed above. ROS 602 supports conditional and/or state dependent execution of controlled processors ...remote electronic. appliances 600, processors, or VDE participants) for processing. The API 682 may also service RPC requests by passing them to applications 608 that register to receive and process specific requests.

API...to know or specify where the service is physically provided, what system or device will service the request, or how the service request will be fulfilled. This feature supports families of services that may be scaled and/or customized for specific applications. Service requests can be forwarded and serviced by different processors and/or different sites as easily as...on different requirements and/or platforms.

RPC manager 732 manages the RPC interface. It receives service requests in the form of one or more "Remote Procedure Calls" (RPCs) from a service requestor, and routes the service requests to a service provider(s) that can service the request. For example, when rights operating system 602 receives a request from a user application via user API 682, RPC manager 732 may route the service request to an appropriate service through the "RPC service interface" (RSI). The RSI is an interface between RPC manager 732, service requestors, and a resource that will accept and service requests.

The RPC interface (RSI) is used for several major ROS 602 subsystems in the preferred... ..655, and multiple communications services.

The preferred embodiment ROS 602 provides the following RPC based service providers/ requestors (each of which have an RPC interface or "RSP that communicates with RPC manager 732... ..connected to user notification interface 686 in the preferred embodiment);

API Service 742 (this API service is connected to user API 682 in the preferred embodiment; Secure Database (File...RPC Call, R.PC manager 732 determines one or more service managers that are to service the request. R.PC manager 732 then routes a service request to the appropriate service(s) (via a RSI associated with a service) for action by the appropriate service manager(s).

For example, if a SPE 503 is to service a request, the RPC Manager 732 routes the request to RSI 736a, which passes the request on... ..SPE device driver 736 for forwarding to the SPE.

Similarly, if EIPE 655 is to service the request, RPC Manager 732 routes the request to RSI 738a for forwarding to a HPE. In... ..services so that RSIs 736a, 738a are different instances of the same RSI. Once a service request has been received by SPE 503 (or HPE 655), the SPE (or HPE) typically dispatches... ..the location

An RPC Services Table may also include control information that indicates which instance of the ...external resources. The service id and subservice id parameters may be specific to the specific service being requested. The buffer Responses by the services (and additional service requests they may themselves generate) are provided to RPC Manager 550 for routing to other service...and version control issues.

In the preferred embodiment, SPE RPC manager 550 first references a service request against the RPC service table to determine the location of the service manager that may service
